THE JOHN MUIR CONFERENCE 2014

John Muir was a conservation visionary of the 19th century and his legacy has helped to shape the development of National Parks and protected areas around the world.

2014 marks the centenary of Muir's death and the year of Homecoming. In honour of this truly influential Scots born figure and as part of our Homecoming celebrations, Scotland's National Parks and conservation bodies have come together to create a one-off conference that will explore our approaches to managing protected areas and national parks in the UK and offer new ways of managing and caring for sensitive landscapes for future generations.

The conference will provide a unique opportunity to network with fellow professionals and practitioners from the conservation, land management, planning development, visitor management and tourism sectors.

The conference will appeal to managers and policy makers in the areas of:

CONSERVATION

PLANNING

LAND USE MANAGEMENT

TOURISM AND VISITOR MANAGEMENT

CONFERENCE PROGRAMME

12 MAY - DAY 1

Study tours highlighting innovative conservation, planning development and visitor management strategies being implemented across Scotland's National Parks and protected areas, followed by conference dinner.

13 MAY - DAY 2

Inspirational speakers will consider John Muir's legacy in our 21st Century society from a breadth of perspectives from conservation practices to economic, health and social benefits.

The day will include a panel debate with the opportunity to pose questions to speakers.
