Welcome from the National Trust of England, Wales and Northern Ireland

It is a great pleasure to welcome you all to Cambridge, to the UK, and to the 16th International Conference of National Trusts.

We have been coming together under the auspices of the ICNT since 1978 and two years ago we met in Entebbe, hosted by the Cross-Cultural Foundation of Uganda. I very much enjoyed meeting representatives of such a wide variety of organisations involved in the protection and promotion of our cultural and natural heritage around the world.

As so often in the history of our various Trusts we are at a moment of enormous change and opportunity, and this conference will explore the question: 'what is the role and purpose of the National Trust movement in the 21st century?'

In this country the National Trust has just embarked on a new strategy which aims to meet the needs of an environment under pressure, and the challenges and expectations of a fast-moving world.

This has brought sharply home to us that John Donne's famous aphorism 'No man is an island' must apply also to us. No National Trust can afford to be an island. In our own countries, we need to work collaboratively with a range of partners, but it is equally important to share ideas and consult with our sister organisations, friends and peers around the world. INTO, the International National Trusts Organisation, now provides a focal point to enable this to happen.

Each INTO member is different but we are all united into a single family by a common and passionate commitment to the importance of protecting and enriching our cultural and natural heritage.

I hope that this conference will result in a useful exchange of ideas and that it will lead to an even closer understanding between all those who serve such great aims.

Dame Helen Ghosh DCB

Welcome from the International National Trusts Organisation

In 1978, the National Trust for Scotland hosted the first ever International Conference of National Trusts. Since then the Trusts of the world have continued to come together in a spirit of collaboration, co-operation and comradeship. INTO, the International National Trusts Organisation, was established in 2007 to provide a permanent secretariat and focal point for the worldwide movement between conferences.

Today, the Trust movement has grown to include a range of countries from Australia all the way through the alphabet to Zimbabwe. The very recent establishment of a Czech National Trust and discussions about similar processes in South Africa, Sweden and Taiwan show that the National Trust approach is still much admired and respected around the world.

The International Conference of National Trusts remains at the heart of the movement and is an important meeting place for INTO members to share experience and develop connections. INTO serves its membership by: providing opportunities to work together; developing and promoting best conservation practices; increasing the capacity of individual organisations; helping to establish Trusts where they do not exist; and by promoting advocacy in the interests of heritage conservation.

Perhaps the greatest benefit is being part of the National Trust family. Whatever our differences in approach, we have a common name and a common purpose: to preserve our nation's heritage, whether buildings, coast or countryside. INTO's role is to make the National Trust movement greater than the sum of its parts by providing a global focal point through which the movement, from every corner of the earth, comes together and works together.

It is wonderful to have so many Trusts represented here in Cambridge and we look forward to spending time together with you, learning about your work and hearing your perspectives on the future of the great movement we all serve.

Catherine Leonard
Head of INTO Secretariat

West Road Concert Hall

Music has a long history at Cambridge. In 1464 the world's first firmly authenticated Bachelor of Music degree was awarded at Cambridge to one Henry Abyngdon, Master of the Children of the Chapel Royal to Edward IV. Over the intervening centuries celebrated musicians such as William Boyce, William Sterndale Bennett, Charles Villiers Stanford, Ralph Vaughan Williams, Arthur Bliss, Alexander Goehr, Robin Holloway and Thomas Adès have studied or taught at Cambridge.

Recognising the importance of music as an academic study, the University established the Faculty of Music in 1947 to teach the newly created Music Tripos. The Faculty now occupies the purpose-built University Music School and West Road Concert Hall, designed by Sir Leslie Martin. The Hall was built in the mid-1970s and is widely regarded as one of Cambridge's premiere music venues. Situated only a few minutes' walk away from the famous Cambridge Backs and King's College, it is renowned for its superb acoustic qualities.

Welcome to the East of England

Welcome to Cambridge, and to the East of England. Our region has some of the nation's most astonishing landscapes, rich in history and natural beauty. Our role at the National Trust is to grow people's love of these special places through our conservation work and our engagement activity, thereby growing support for our cause.

Our region covers a large geographical area comprising the six counties of Bedfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Essex, Hertfordshire, Norfolk and Suffolk. Our four most popular mansion properties are Wimpole, Anglesey Abbey, Ickworth and Blickling Hall. Other substantial but smaller estates are at Oxburgh Hall, Felbrigg Hall and Melford Hall.

The region also manages extensive tracts of open countryside, many of them acquired early in the Trust's history for their value as natural habitats. Wicken Fen in Cambridgeshire is a rare example of an original fenland landscape in the midst of extensive lowland agriculture, Hatfield Forest in Essex is Europe's most complete surviving medieval hunting forest, while Dunwich Heath is a popular area of gorse-covered heathland on the Suffolk coast.

Despite the diversity of our places, we are a family united by our passion for the Trust's work and for the East of England region. We hope you enjoy your time with us.

King's College

In the heart of Cambridge, and yet cloistered by buildings of outstanding beauty, with the River Cam slipping by quietly at its western boundary, King's College offers possibly one of the most serene and photogenic sites in the country. Wander through the Front Court and admire the Chapel - one of the world's finest examples of gothic architecture and home to a world-famous choir.

Theatre Royal

The only surviving Regency playhouse in Britain.

The Theatre Royal is one of Britain's most significant theatre buildings and the only surviving Regency playhouse in the country.

The recently restored Grade I listed theatre offers you an authentic 19th century theatre-going experience, combined with contemporary bar and restaurant for the 21st century theatre-goer. This is the only theatre in the world capable of presenting repertoire from the Regency period in an authentic and appropriate setting.

The theatre presents a vibrant, year-round programme of drama, music, dance and light entertainment, featuring many of this country's leading companies and performers. It also offers a wide-ranging educational and community-based programme of activities, tours and heritage teas.

MODIFY Conference on heritage skills and accreditation: open to delegates

Meeting of the new INTO Executive

Please Note this programme and timings may be subject to change.

Anglesey Abbey

Immaculately restored house with gardens and a working watermill.

A passion for tradition and impressing guests inspired one man to transform a run-down country house and desolate landscape. At the age of 30, the future Lord Fairhaven began to create his first home. Wanting to inspire and surprise visitors, he created a spectacular garden with planting for all seasons and a house in which to entertain. Life revolved around country pursuits such as shooting and horse racing, and guests enjoyed considerable luxury.

Activity Days' Discussions

The three Activity Days of the conference take you around five of our properties near Cambridge – Wimpole Estate, Wicken Fen, Anglesey Abbey, Ickworth Estate and the Theatre Royal in Bury St Edmunds. The format entails a number of sessions on a range of different topics that relate to the work of INTO member organisations. You'll be in small groups and will attend specific sessions each day, with the exception of sessions at Ickworth, where you will be able to choose two from seven different sessions, on a 'first come, first served' basis.

The format of the discussion sessions during the middle three days are conversation led and informal, with plenty of space for us all to talk, listen, and get to know one another. Some sessions are outdoors and some indoors. Each session is facilitated by members of the National Trust of England, Wales & Northern Ireland team, and designed to give time to encourage the sharing of your perspectives – so please come prepared to be involved with the discussion, debate and share your experiences; bear in mind these may just be a starting point for the session and each will be shaped by the thoughts and knowledge you bring to them as delegates.

Ickworth

A Georgian Italianate palace in an idyllic English landscape.

Ickworth's impressive Rotunda – a magnificent showcase commissioned by the 4th Earl of Bristol to house his priceless treasures collected on tours around Europe in the 18th century – is an architectural marvel. For 200 years, the eccentric and sometimes infamous Hervey family added to the treasures inside and out, also creating the earliest Italianate garden in England.

Tuesday 8 September: Cultural Identities at Wimpole Estate / Anglesey Abbey & Wicken Fen

Defining and Using Spirit of Place

This discussion will explore the principle of Spirit of Place against the backdrop of internationally significant places, drawing on the wide and varied experience of our international delegates. Conservation is about revealing and sharing the significance of places and ensuring their special qualities are protected, enhanced, understood and enjoyed by present and future generations.

Using the Past to Engage with Contemporary Issues

What responsibilities do we, as a movement, have for addressing contemporary issues through the lens of the past? 2015 sees a number of significant anniversaries that speak to us today. Commemoration of World War One (1914-1918) reminds us of the legacy of that conflict for contemporary geopolitics. The 800th anniversary of Magna Carta (sealed in June 1215) is a moment to reflect upon the worldwide spread of ideas and values that have shaped our politics since the medieval period.

Meeting the Needs and Expectations of Today's Visitors

Presenting coherent and meaningful stories about places, while meeting the diverse needs of our audiences, will be the focus of this session. Competition for audiences has never been keener; we need constantly to keep ahead of our rivals and be aware of the needs and expectations of visitors.

Cultural Identities and Intangible Heritage in a Homogenising World

This discussion explores working with intangible heritage within the context of a globalising world. Intangible heritage is the subject of its own UNESCO convention (2003), and is a precious commodity that needs nurturing and protecting just as much as the physical heritage of places, buildings and landscapes. At the last ICNT in Entebbe, Uganda, in 2013, INTO called for special measures to protect and promote intangible heritage, especially within the least economically developed nations.

Wicken Fen

The National Trust's oldest nature reserve and England's most famous fen.

Wicken Fen, one of Europe's most important wetlands, supports an abundance of wildlife. There are more than 8,500 species, including a spectacular array of plants, birds and dragonflies. The raised boardwalk and lush grass droves allow easy access to a lost landscape of flowering meadows, sedge and reed beds, where you can encounter rarities such as hen harriers, water voles and bitterns. The Wicken Fen Vision, an ambitious landscape-scale conservation project, is opening up new areas of land to explore. Our grazing herds of Highland cattle and Konik ponies are helping to create a diverse range of new habitats.

Wednesday 9 September: Growing the Movement at Theatre Royal and Ickworth

What Do Young People Want From Us?

With increasingly elderly populations in the developed world and large young populations in the developing world, how do we ensure our places are relevant and what cultural story are we telling our young people? This discussion will explore both our role within this, and some of the tools and techniques INTO members have used to try to connect to younger audiences and minds.

Communicating our Brand and Cause

Recent years have seen a transformation in communication techniques and tools, and this discussion will reveal how we are approaching sharing our messages around the world. It will also pose the question of how we create a shared understanding of the cause of an organisation – why it exists, what it does and how it does it. As a movement, what do we think is the future of membership organisations like ours? Do we understand what membership means to people and what the alternatives are? How can we better communicate our cause?

Techniques for Fundraising

Fundraising is a vital element of our work around the world, and this session will explore the many ways we look to secure external funding for our work.

Working with Volunteers

Volunteer involvement is one of the most cost effective ways to grow resource or 'extend the budget', and involving more volunteers helps us reach more people (growing our supporter base) and increase our relevance (as supporters help shape our work, making it meaningful to them and others). But the future 'supply' of volunteers will be very different: it will be a more competitive environment with future volunteers having different expectations.

Funding our Futures; Financial Models from Around the World

We will examine how we make our places sustainable. Historically, Ickworth was one of the largest deficit properties in the National Trust of England, Wales and Northern Ireland, but now generates a surplus. The property gains income from many different sources: partnership agreements with third parties, residential and farm lettings, holiday accommodation, commercial income from visitors and endowment income. What wider relevance is there in these pathways to financial sustainability?

Legal and Governance Frameworks

National Trusts vary in their relationship to the state: some occupying a quasi-public sector role, others wholly private and independent. With the retreat of the state from many walks of life following the financial crisis of 2008, National Trusts face both opportunities (in the form of the potential acquisition of new responsibilities formerly undertaken by the state) and challenges (given the increased pressure on resources).

Our Role as Campaigners and Trusted Critics

As individual organisations, but also as members of INTO, we have a powerful voice that can shape or influence agendas on desks beyond ours. What perspectives can we share on this from the different approaches we have all tried, and where have we achieved success beyond our boundaries? What can we share about the areas we choose to speak out on, and how do we balance the expectations of our existing supporters?

Wimpole Estate

A working estate still guided by the seasons, with an impressive mansion and Home Farm.

The mansion, at the heart of this estate, is evidence of Elsie Bambridge's success in creating a home. Intimate rooms contrast with beautiful and unexpected Georgian interiors, including Soane's breath-taking Yellow Drawing Room and wonderful plunge bath. The fascinating basement corridor offers a glimpse into life below stairs. Stroll around the colourful parterre garden and wander through the Pleasure Grounds to the walled garden, abundant with fruit, vegetables and herbaceous borders. Home Farm contrasts the traditional farmyard with the noisy modern piggery and cattle sheds. Stride out across the landscape park, among the rare-breed cattle, and imagine the previous owners planning their visions of grand avenues and spectacular vistas.

Thursday 10 September: Land, Landscape and Nature at Wimpole Estate / Anglesey Abbey & Wicken Fen

Adapting our Land Management to a Changing World

How can National Trusts best intervene in the debates about natural and built heritage and learn from the experience of different international contexts? Threats to the character and identity of both natural and built heritage through inappropriate development are a common refrain across the INTO network. Likewise what are the approaches which help to balance the competing demands on the finite resource of land, and how do the impacts of climate change shape this?

The Relevance of Agriculture and Farming

With a growing population around the world, there are growing pressures on land and continual technological changes to agriculture and farming. Farming has been transformed over the centuries and decades, but what role have our organisations taken in conserving the tangible or intangible aspects of agriculture and farming, or leading the way in shaping its future. What is the expectation of our supporters regarding our role in these questions? What are the ways we can connect our supporters and visitors to understanding the impacts and opportunities that 21st century agriculture and farming presents?

Landscape and Urban Scale Conservation

How can we build effective collaborations and partnerships in landscape-scale or city-wide projects? Owning and managing buildings, land and landscapes is something that sets the National Trust movement apart from other charities and campaigns, but what are the methods that we find most effective when building support and action across a broader front? How do we not just own, but also influence and lead, and have a positive impact beyond our legal boundaries?

From Source to Sea: Working with Water Catchments, Rivers and the Coast

As so many National Trusts belong to small island nations, the coast is vitally important to our movement and our supporters. This year, the Trust's Neptune Coastline Campaign celebrates its golden jubilee and, inspired by Neptune, the Conservatoire du Littoral also mark their 40th anniversary. This discussion will examine our longer-term drive to adapt to changing climatic conditions and mitigate the impact of future flooding events through the way we work with water from source to sea.

Evening Entertainment

Monday 7 September: Gala Reception at King's College

Delegates are invited to the Welcome Reception being held in the magnificent Great Hall of King's College. In attendance will be Tim Parker, Chairman of the National Trust of England, Wales and Northern Ireland, and Loyd Grossman, Chair of The Heritage Alliance and Churches Conservation Trust.

You'll be entertained by the choir Eboracum Baroque. The group will perform music by a range of baroque composers including Henry Purcell, William Byrd, William Croft, Handel and the Wimpole composer in residence, Thomas Tudway.

Wednesday 9 September: Ickworth

Delegates will spend the evening in the sumptuous grounds and buildings of Ickworth. The evening is set aside for networking and enjoyment.

The entertainment will be provided by the very English custom of Morris Dancing on the lawn, featuring the local group the Green Dragon Morris Dancers.

Thursday 10 September: Wimpole Home Farm

The Final Night Party is taking place in the Great Barn and takes the form of a barbecue and English folk dancing with the band Blackbeard's Tea Party.

This is a chance for you to 'do-si-do' or 'ladies' chain', let your hair down and enjoy yourselves with your old and new friends. Barn dances can be very energetic. If you dance every dance (which we hope you will!) you're likely to get hot, so remember to drink plenty of liquid and wear layers.

Justin Albert,
Director, National Trust in Wales and INTO Executive Committee Member

Justin joined the Trust in 2011 after a twenty year career in broadcasting including working in the US for Discovery Channel, Animal Planet, BBC and National Geographic, and has directed and produced over 30 documentaries on conservation, history and global issues. He is vice president of the Hay Festival, Trustee of Hay Castle Trust, and director of the Centre for Advanced Welsh and Celtic Studies, and a member of the British Association of Film and Television Arts. Justin lives on a farm with his wonderful partner, Nancy Lavin, (occasionally) three big grown-up children, lots of sheep, a few black cows, and a scruffy and usually smelly terrier called Whinny.

David J. Brown,
Executive Vice President and Chief Preservation
Officer, National Trust for Historic Preservation, USA

David oversees the National Trust for Historic Preservation's campaigns which help protect some of the country's most significant and threatened historic places, guides advocacy work, directs support for local preservation leadership, promotes preservation's role in environmental sustainability through the Preservation Green Lab, and is leading the exploration and adaptation of new preservation models at the National Trust for Historic Preservation sites.

David served as the founding executive director of the Preservation Alliance of Virginia and also as chairman of the Governor's Commission to Study Historic Preservation in Virginia and on the board of The Corporation for Jefferson's Poplar Forest. Today, he is part of the executive committee of the International National Trusts Organisation (INTO) and represents the National Trust on the Board of Trustees of the National Main Street Center.

Natalie Bull,
Chief Executive Officer, National Trust for Canada

Natalie studied heritage conservation at the Université de Montréal, joined the City of Ottawa's heritage team in 1990, and spent 13 years at the federal Heritage Conservation Directorate, working at iconic sites including the Vimy Monument in France and the Bar U Ranch in Alberta. Natalie is a fellow and former president of the Association for Preservation Technology International.

Natalie's first day of work as CEO ten years ago coincided with attending her first International Conference of National Trusts in Washington, DC. Six years later, her organisation was proud to co-host the 2011 ICNT and INTO Congress in Victoria, Canada. Natalie's focus at the National Trust is on building productive relationships with an extensive stakeholder group across the country. Natalie is also leading efforts to renew the organisation's direct involvement in historic places, in partnership with the Prince's Regeneration Trust.

Thank You to our Sponsors and Partners

American Express is a longtime supporter of historic preservation around the world as we believe in helping people value and protect their natural and built heritage. The company is delighted to sponsor the 16th International Conference of National Trusts (ICNT) where National Trust organisations from around the world will gather to develop new strategies for championing heritage, for engaging people and communities, and for growing public understanding of the importance of protecting, preserving and reusing historic places for the enjoyment and benefit of people today and future generations.

The Helen Hamlyn Trust's core ethos is to support the development of innovative projects, which aim to effect lasting change and improve quality of life. As an independent grant-making trust, its principal focus is on the initiation of medium-and long-term projects linked to the shared interests of Helen Hamlyn and her late husband Paul Hamlyn. The trust works in the fields of medicine, arts and culture, education and welfare, heritage and conservation in India, international humanitarian affairs and healthy ageing.

THE HEADLEY TRUST

The Headley Trust is involved in the conservation and recording of heritage (including ecclesiastical & vernacular architecture, archaeology and cultural artefacts), primarily in South Eastern Europe (Slovenia, Croatia, Albania, Macedonia, Bulgaria, Romania, Serbia, Montenegro, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Turkey); raising awareness of heritage issues in these countries, supporting the capacity of new heritage NGOs, and training the next generation of conservation and heritage professionals.

Centres and Associations are supporter groups of the National Trust who make more of their membership and involvement by sharing unique experiences and finding more about the places they feel passionately about, whilst promoting our work in their local community and raising money for projects. Two of our East of England regional Associations chose to generously donate towards the cost of the conference: Enfield Association and Royston and Saffron Walden Association. Their support has helped us bring together National Trusts and similar organisations from around the world to exchange information, develop and promote best practice, and work to effect change.

The Ruan Heritage Foundation

This first private foundation to support and promote urban built heritage conservation in China was founded by Professor Ruan Yisan in 2006. The foundation raises the awareness of people and government about public participation in our heritage conservation, through cooperation with government on conservation projects; through aiding the heritage site independently; through the sourcing of, and provision of, financial aid and also through the granting of awards to organisations and individuals who have made significant contributions to the conservation of heritage in China.

The Foundation has a small exhibition of Chinese traditional gardens at the conference.

Thank You to our Sponsors and Partners

Our thanks go to the following people and organisations, without whom the conference would not be as special as it is:

Cambridge University Press

Cambridge University Press (CUP) is the publishing business of the University of Cambridge. Granted letters patent by Henry VIII in 1534, it is the world's oldest publishing house and the second-largest university press in the world (after Oxford University Press).

Conference Cambridge

Conference Cambridge is the free, official venue-finding service for the University of Cambridge and its Colleges as well as hotels and other unique properties in the city.

Heffers Bookshop

Heffers has been selling books in Cambridge for over 130 years. Heffers is one of the region's most comprehensive bookshops stocking an extensive range of academic and general books. In addition to books, the bookshop offers DVDs, cards and wrap, gift and functional stationery, and medical instruments.
